The Oracle Academy offers industry-leading professional development and curriculum to help educators engage students in computer science and engineering and prepare them with in-demand skills. As the steward of Java, Oracle is uniquely positioned to help education institutions integrate Java into their curriculum.

ORACLE® ACADEMY

Enhance your course offering and student learning with Java, one of the top programming languages in the world.

The Oracle Academy Introduction to Computer Science Program includes the following Java offering:

- Alice 3 Teacher Training, for Primary through Early Secondary Levels: A one-day seminar that prepares educators to introduce students to object-oriented programming. Alice can be used in computer science courses and to integrate computer science and 21st century skills into other subject areas.
- Greenfoot Teacher Training, for Secondary Levels: A one-day seminar that prepares computer science teachers to use the Greenfoot environment to teach students advanced Java programming constructs through the creation of interactive games.
- Java Fundamentals and Java Programming Teacher Training and Curriculum, for Secondary and Technical Schools, Two-Year Colleges, and Universities: A comprehensive on-line and in-class training that prepares educators to teach two, full-semester courses. Free student curriculum introduces basic computer science concepts using animations and games and integrates Java programming language tools to transition from graphical user interface into direct Java coding.
 - Highly structured, 180-hour curriculum integrates easily into computer science programs.
 - Curriculum is designed to prepare students for the AP Computer Science A exam (U.S.) and for Oracle certification.
